Interior room model

Interior room models

We all have experience of what it means to live in an apartment. Normally we find ourselves starting the day in an apartment, as a form of horizontally arranged living with a number of rooms serving different purposes, sleeping, cooking, and so on. We invited students to understand more deeply what it means to live in an apartment and how the structure and atmosphere inherent in a dwelling affects the quality of the way it is possible to inhabit a space or collection of spaces. Students were invited to choose an apartment, preferably not their own home, but somewhere they could gain access to. Having made their choice, they were required to study a space or collection of rooms carefully and find a good angle to photograph it, being careful with the light level and composition of the photograph. It was important that the photograph was one that was taken for the purposes of this exercise and not one they had previously taken at some point in the past. Students were then asked to make a model of the room(s) at a scale of 1:10 or 1:20 based on a print of the photograph they had taken. The model needed to accurately recreate everything that can be seen in the print. Having done this, they then needed to photograph the model they had made. Care was taken to recreate the lighting levels and atmosphere they observed in the room chosen as illustrated in the photograph they took. They then needed to take a photograph of the model and print it at the same size as the original print.
