Autumn Semester 2015
Berlin Facades

Introduction

The project work this semester required students to develop strategies for the repair and densification of existing urban blocks in a neighbourhood of Berlin.

The drawings you can see on the accompanying pages are survey drawings the students produced of a number of buildings we selected as helpful points of reference. In looking at these buildings carefully, measuring them and recording them photographically, and then drawing them very accurately in their current condition, our hope was that they would act as a helpful point of reference for the project work that was subsequently undertaken by the students. The drawings were considered as a collective resource that could be drawn upon throughout the course of the semester.
