Introduction

This semester we worked in the Italian city of Genoa to develop comprehensive design proposals for a site near the historical centre on an area that was formerly part of the harbour infrastructure.

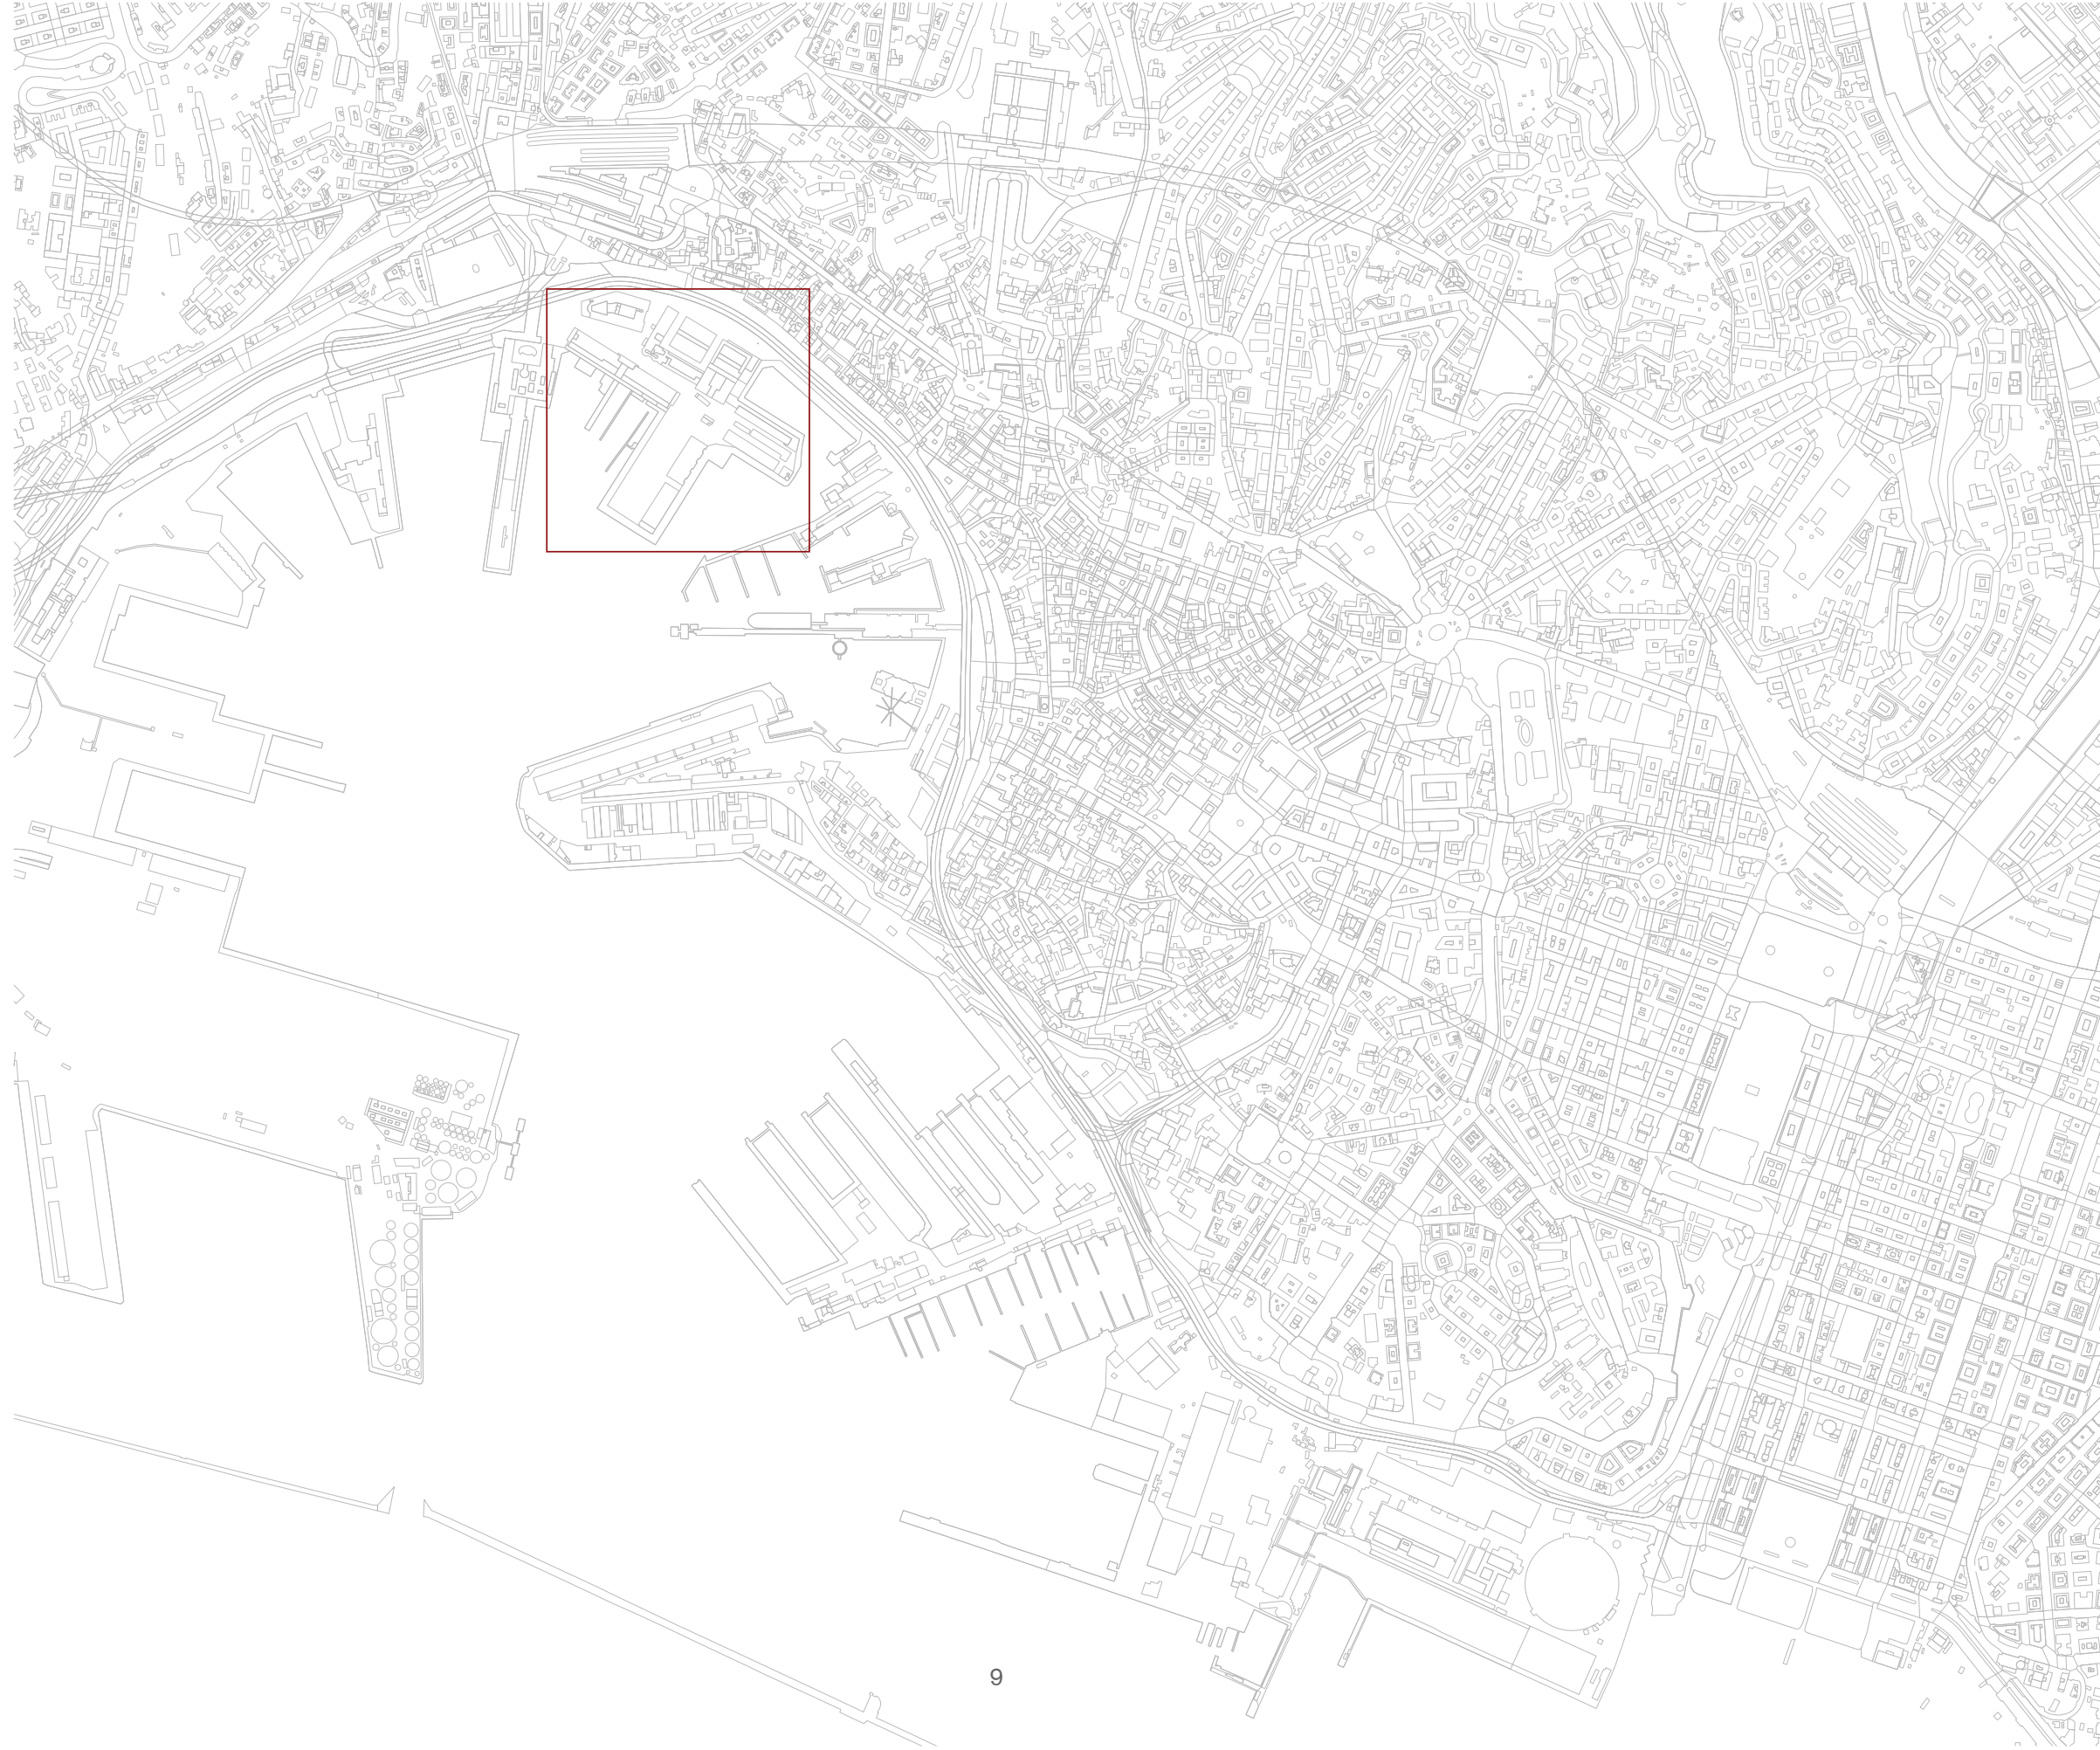

Projects have created a coherent urban strategy that can be tested and refined at a larger scale. At the beginning of the semester, a survey of exemplary buildings (documented in a separate catalogue) was made in order to develop an understanding of the typology case a torre, a relevant building type within the context of the city and topography conditions.

A study trip to Genoa was planned at the start of the semester, to explore the city and the project site. This allowed students to experience the urban character of the city and provided the opportunity to visit some of its most significant urban conditions.

We were particularly interested in exploring low-rise towers as a building type and how they can increase density and create a sense of proximity.

Acknowledgements

I am particularly grateful to Valter Scelsi who helped with the preparation of the semester and offered an inspiring walk tour of Genoa.

I would also like to thank Romina Grillo, Thomas Padnamabhan and Andrea Zanderigo for their fruitful contribution at the intermediate and final reviews. I thank them all warmly for their valuable insights.

As always, I am deeply grateful to my assistants, Flavia Saggese and Cristina Roiz de la Parra Solano for organising activities of the studio, supporting the students throughout the semester and for the lectures they offered, and to Marina Aldrovandi for editorial support.

Finally, I commend all the students who worked in the studio this semester: the beautiful work documented here is a testament to their enthusiasm and commitment.
